

Kevin Simmonds

THE SMELL OF NUTMEG

for Jacqueline du Pré

My swan softens
In the corner.
Inside its sunny husk, shine
Swarms.
I remember wood and string on my shoulder,
Vibrato confessed across combined bodies.
Our double helix.
This is how I grow tired of harvesting
Moons,
Being grateful.